WAR BABIES SQUEALING

NEW YORK investors are emitting a great caterwauling over the decline of the war babies, which are showing signs of marasmus with the prospect of succumbing to inanition in the course of the next few weeks. The promise of war with Mexico bolstered most of them after they had reached a tenuous stage, but the peace policy of President Wilson knocked the props from under the weaklings. Of course, Carranza is going to buy a lot of stuff in the shape of munitions of war, but the manufacturers of the United States do not find any cheerful note in this announcement since there is a disparity between the wants of the de facto government and the visible supply of specie. Coin is the only open sesame to the good will and confidence of the manufacturers and, from all reports, it appears there is a famine in that particular commodity, so there is a growing vacuum in the law of supply and demand. After a period of inflation that piled up millions upon millions for the fortunate early buyers who were shrewd enough to retire, the prosperity of the war babies has brought them into the vision of the tax collector who is going after them tooth and nail with the object of forcing them to come through and help support the country which should profit from the hostilities in Europe. Uncle Sam himself has been pinched for some ready cash and he thinks the munition barons and their dupes deserve his attentions. That is why he is going after the war babies to make them come through with "war taxes" for the support of a peaceful administration which is the only government on earth that has found the way of levying a war tax without war rendering such a step necessary. The original slump in war stocks was due to the publication of various statements of earnings which failed to fill sanguine expectations. Then on top of that came the announcement that congress was contemplating a heavy war tax. While the new revenue measure is liberal, as it does not propose to tax war stocks until there is a surplus over ten per cent of profit, it will tend to reduce some of the extraordinary profits that have been figured on. The taxes will range from 2 to 8 per cent on gross receipts after deductions have been made. Component parts of the munitions are exempt from this tax with the solitary exception of copper, which comes in for a discriminating impost which will not help the administration in appealing to the workers of the Ely and Luning districts of Nevada. Why copper should be seized upon as a pretext for a new tax while sulphur, alcohol and cotton ingredients are exempt is one of those things that are past understanding.

RUSSIA'S GREAT VICTORY

THE stubborn stand of the Austrians against the Russian battering ram at Czernowitz had a military and political value of equal importance.

Czernowitz is on the extreme right flank of the Austrian armies operating against the Russians and is near the border of Rumania. The Russians have been eager to take and the Austrians to hold the city, so as to impress the Rumanians. In this political contest the Russians have won, by capturing Czernowitz. Within a few weeks after the conclusion of commercial treaties between Rumania on the one side and Germany and Austria on the other, treaties calculated to bind these countries more closely together, the Russians have defeated the Austrians in a great battle and driven them back into the interior of Bukovina province and Galicia. It has been assumed by many that Rumania would go in on the side of the victor, but if that dictum be taken as approximately correct it is necessary to modify it by saying that Rumania will not enter the war until the victor is so sure of himself that no one else can doubt his ultimate triumph. Rumania has long had a secret treaty with Germany. The terms of it are not common knowledge, but it is said that the Teutonic ruler of Rumania bound his country to aid Germany in many ways in case of war. It is safe to say, therefore, that the continued Russian victories will be a bitter disappointment to the king of Rumania, who will find himself besieged by the Slavophiles to join Russia.

TO BACK THE PRESIDENT

IT is not a far hark back to the days of the last election when every voter in Nevada was urged to vote for the Democratic candidate for United States senator to the end that the president would have a sufficient backing to sustain him in any effort to inaugurate reforms. What is the poor old party going to do now? Will the voters of Nevada be called on this year to stand by the policies of the president and vouch for that vacillation and weary waiting which brought that tired feeling to the whole country? Perhaps Nevada will back the man who has no backbone and is sadly in need of some support, but that is a long shot that will be settled at the polls in a way that will not leave any room for doubt.

Perhaps it is well for Nevada Democrats to look at the border warfare as a soft snap for Texas. With 25,000 soldiers stationed in El Paso it is obvious that there is a rake-off for somebody. It is not generally known that the cabinet contains two members from Texas and that Col. E. M. House, the confidential adviser and super-military aide to the president also hails from that state. It is not nice to be a buffer state, but when the pork barrel is turned away from the bayous of Louisiana and the millions diverted to Texas there is going to be a long drawn out howl of disgust that will add another nail to the coffin of the administration.

Judging from the prominent Democratic workers who entertained the three Republican candidates for United States senator during the past week the candidate, whosoever he may be, is assured of good support from the opposition.

This is the time to swat the fly. Don't tire of the good work, but keep on swatting, and then, after resting, swat again.

TRACTORS SHOW GREAT SAVING

FRANCE FINDS IT NECESSARY TO PROVIDE SUBSTITUTES FOR HUMAN LABOR

(By Associated Press.)

PARIS, July 12.—The latest types of traction and motor farm implements experimented with at Gournay sur Marne under the direction of a representative of the Academy of Agriculture reduced the cost of plowing land more than twenty-five per cent in comparison with the best previous records.

Two and a half acres were plowed in light soil with an outlay of ten gallons of gasoline in four hours; between thirteen and fourteen gallons were required for the same work with the most efficient machines tested last fall. In heavy soil the difference in favor of the new implements was about the same.

The wear of the machines tried was considerable on account of difficulties of lubrication in flying dust, but the results were so favorable in comparison with animal power that the verdict is favorable to motor implements.

The academy proposes the organization of training schools for conductors of traction and motor implements at once, since these machines must be relied upon to make up for the shortage in men and horses for fall seeding.
